

Today we read a book about Charlie and his favorite book. The class talked about how readers often have a “favorite book” that they love to read (or have read) over and over again. For tonight, I’ve challenged the children to think about a possible “forever” book that they might like to share with the class. They may either bring the actual book to school (labeled with a post it note on the inside cover) or they may write the title and author of the book on a piece of paper. We will be making a class book based on all of our “forever books” after Winter Break and we will need the books (or titles of them) before break begins this Friday. Thank you! 😊

---

My Forever Book is

---

by

---